How to get there

Paros Island can be reached by plane or by ferry. The airport only caters to domestic flights.

The flight time from Athens to Paros is approx. 35 minutes. The airport is located 9km from the capital of Paros, Parikia but you can find public buses that run frequently from/ to the airport. Taxis are also available.

From May to September there are more than 3-4 ferries leaving every day from Piraeus Port/Athens to Paros (duration 3-5.5 hours). In off season months (April and October) the ferry connections are reduced by 50%.

Paroikia Marina

Parikia (Paroikia) port is located in Paroikia bay which is the main port of Paros island for all kinds of vessels. The taxi ride from the airport to the marina takes about 20 minutes. The ferry terminal from the marina is at a 10-minutes walk.

Port docking is made stern-to or bow-to in the inner harbour or in calm weather in the bay outside. No mooring lines are available, you will have to use your anchor. Electricity and water is provided through pillars. Coffee shops and restaurants in the marina can provide WiFi service.

Weather Conditions

The prevailing wind in this region of the Cyclades is N-NW, you should expect medium to strong winds, especially during July and August where the 'Meltemi'-a local phenomenon with strong N and NE winds- takes place, ideal for sailing focused crews.

Electricity and Water

At each berth there are special pillars providing 220 volt electricity and water. Your first and last night in the marina are included in the charter price and so is the consumption of water and electricity.

Refueling

You can find refueling trucks on most islands during your charter. Your last one will take place at Paroikia marina, where Eversails staff will help you with the procedure. A truck will be called once you dock. First thing you have to do is check for the truck's fuel meter to be zero. Diesel costs about €1,5/l.
